<sup>2</sup> The petition concerns 4958 alleged victims, who are individualized in the list attached to this report.

<sup>4</sup> The observations submitted by each party were duly transmitted to the opposing party.

V. ALLEGED FACTS

1. The complaint concerns the situation of five Maya Achí indigenous communities who claim being pre-Columbian settlers of a rural property which they have historically managed in a communal way. They indicate that in order to secure their ownership rights, they bought the plots of land from the State and had them registered in the name of 17 of their members as collective property, for it was bought with money from all the inhabitants of the property. They submit that, in the context of the internal armed conflict, some community members participating in the Civil Self-Defense Patrols (PAC), acting in bad faith, 3They affirm that in said context the alleged victims have been displaced, persecuted and, some of them, even victims of acts of violence such as murder, injuries and threats by those acquiring said titles or by relatives of these.

2. The complaint has been lodged on behalf of 4958 alleged victims, Maya Achí natives, from the communities of the Village of Xococ, the Village of Buena Vista, the Hamlet of Patixlan, the Hamlet of Chuaperol and the Village of Vegas de Santo Domingo. It is alleged that for over 170 years these families have been joint and collective owners of the territory of Finca Buena Vista, located in the municipality of Rabinal, department of Baja Verapaz. They indicate that the rural property was initially demarcated, registered, and allocated to the church in 1849; that natives to that area were in charge of cultivating it; and that in 1869 the property was nationalized. They assert that in 1881 17 of their ancestors, living in the property, bought it at a public auction with contributions from all the members of the community in order to continue using it, and registered it as communal land at the Land Registry Office in 1905. They indicate that they inherited this land from their ancestors, descendants of the 17 initial communal landholders, based on indigenous traditions; and that they continue owning these plots of land in the present. They indicate that they have historically held these lands and that given the legal requirements of the crown and, following independence, the governors, they had to legalize these plots of land in order to continue holding and using them.

3. They claim that many households live within the territory of the rural property while others live in the communities previously mentioned but use these plots of land for economic activities for their livelihood; however, to the five affected communities, the property is a territory that belongs to all Maya Achí natives who have inhabited and cultivated it despite that fact that it is registered in the name of only 17 natives. They submit that each household has a plot of land based on their needs, work and customs, and that the families have passed their parcels from one generation to the next as each household grows and new families are formed. The petitioners moreover assert the most members pass their rights to their relatives, either verbally or through private documents, and that rarely do they do so by legal procedures or allocate or register their ownership or property rights at the land registry office, for they have no individual land titles.

4. The petitioners submit that since 1981, in the framework of the internal armed conflict, 11 members of these communities, former PAC members working and cooperating with the army and current members of the exPAC (a group of former members of the PAC), using a terror campaign created by their military might, harassed and coerced the alleged victims into giving them money to purportedly update the legal certainty of the rural property. They indicate that since 1992 these individuals have used the money to undertake judicial and notary procedures in bad faith in order to seize the territory of Finca Buena Vista, obtaining individual property rights over the rural property by intestate succession proceedings in which they were declared sole and legitimate heirs of some of the 17 initial communal landholders. They assert that in 1996, the exPAC partly rescinded collective ownership rights, seized 10 parcels of the main property and registered them at the Land Registry Office as new private properties. They claim that none of these actions were notified to the alleged victims, because the Official Gazette where legal notices are published was unknown and inaccessible to them, and that the Ombudsman's Office failed to assist the alleged victims. In addition, they claim that during the armed conflict they were unable to report the wrongful seizure of their lands, for fear of retaliation after several members of their communities were killed by the PAC.

5. The petitioners assert that since 1999 the exPAC have lodged numerous civil and criminal complaints in order to displace them, and that although such claims were dismissed in some of the eviction proceedings, in none of these did the courts recognize the indigenous right to collective land ownership. They submit that although they have succeeded in keeping hold of the lands, they are still at risk of being displaced. They claim that they have been subjected to restrictions on the use and enjoyment of their land and natural resources, which they rely on for living, because the exPAC do not allow them to access areas that the alleged victims historically used for this purpose. As a result, the communities have been plunged into poverty. They explain that the exPAC have deprived the communities of access to several water sources and, in some cases, sold plots of land with access to water; consequently, the communities have had to buy water. They moreover assert that permits have been granted for logging in their parcels. They also claim that their agricultural produce has been sabotaged, and their hunting and food gathering practices, along with their access to traditional health systems, the celebration of religious and traditional ceremonies, obstructed. They indicate that this situation has plunged them into extreme economic, social and cultural poverty.

6. Likewise, they assert that several indigenous leaders were threatened and killed in order to discourage the claim on the lands. In particular, they denounce that in 2007 unidentified persons killed Bonifacio Lajuj Caxum, the late President of the Pro Tierra Achí Association; that Victor Ismalej Uscap, President of the Pro Tierra Achi Association, and his granddaughter received death threats, and that the husband of the latter was injured with a blade by the exPAC's relatives. They also assert that community representatives Faustina Ismalej Vaely and Victor Osorio Sucup (who was also injured with a blade) received death threats. They indicate that these events were reported to different authorities but were not duly investigated and that those responsible are yet to be found. In addition, they submit that in 1999 the Justice of the Peace of Rabina undertook a legal inspection at the property and, exceeding her powers, tried to fix the boundaries of the wrong areas; therefore, some members of the community held her and her assistants. As a result, they submit that 18 communal landowners were prosecuted, seven of whom were convicted on the charges of wrongful detention and coercion, and that they were deprived of state legal assistance despite their low income.

7. The petitioners indicate that since 1999 they have sought state intervention through the Presidential Unit for Legal Assistance and Dispute Settlement in Land Matters and the Ministry of Agriculture, to negotiate an agreement with the exPAC. They submit that after several meetings they were unable to settle the conflict through the talks. They also assert that in the framework of negotiations, the Governor of Baja Verapaz department, in her role of Coordinator of the Commission on Agriculture, requested the National Forestry Institute (INAB) to suspend the permits allowing the extraction of wood. They hold that this measure seriously harmed their right to use the resources of the forest, because that was their source of wood for house-building and cooking. They indicate that they filed complaints before the Governor and the INAB, but these were rejected under the pretense of favoring negotiations.

8. With regard to the exhaustion of domestic remedies, they assert that by the time the petition was lodged there were about 38 judicial complaints against the communal landowners, some of which had been filed in 1999. They also submit that they filed a remedy to secure their rights over the rural property. They indicate that three complaints are currently being dealt with by the Trial Judge for Civil and Economic Matters of Baja Verapaz. Two of these are ordinary claims on the property, both of which were filed against communal landholders; and the other concerns amparo proceedings on property issues brought by the communities against the exPAC. As to the latter complaint, they indicate that it was filed on February 14, 2011 by Victor Ismalej Uscap, President and legal representative of the Pro Tierra Achí Association. They affirm that this remedy was filed against the exPAC so the five communities can keep the ancestral lands until those interested conclusively prove, before the competent judge, that the communal landholders do not have the law on their side. They moreover claim that in 2011 they were unable to continue their legal activity because they could not afford the fees of their representatives.

9. They claim that the exception established in Article 46.2.a of the Convention applies to the instant matter. They indicate that although the Constitution, the Civil Code and the Peace Agreements establish provisions to protect indigenous peoples' rights to collective land property, the State has not created specific mechanisms for the defense, restitution and protection of these rights. They allege that to date, there is no legal procedure allowing them to protect their rights and defend their communal lands or their system of collective land use and management. They assert that the lack of such rules violates their right to equal protection and non-discrimination, for exPAC's rights to private property are better protected than their rights to communal property are. They also indicate that the State did not provide them with free legal assistance despite their petitions and the meetings with the Ministry of Agriculture.

10. Lastly, as to the State's observations on the competence ratione temporis, they claim that although the private land titlings occurred between 1980 and 1995, the effects of these procedures continue harming their rights.

11. For its part, the State claims that the instant matter concerns purported violations taking place between 1981 and 1986. Therefore, it considers that this petition is not eligible to be presented before the Inter-American Court on Human Rights in view of its lack of competence to rule on facts occurring before March 9, 1987, the date of Guatemala's acceptance of jurisdiction, including this reservation regarding time.

12. It asserts that the petitioners lack private property titles that prove their ownership of the land. It asserts that, on the contrary, the 11 exPAC members do have such documents. It claims that the indigenous families currently occupy the parcels of those who have proved being legitimate landowners; therefore, these can request the eviction of the families. In this regard, it submits that there are several legal actions filed by the 11 exPAC members against people usurping their properties. It informs that these include three eviction summary proceedings: a trial lodged before the Trial Court for Civil and Economic Matters of the Municipality of Salamá, in which a person was sentenced and their eviction ordered, a judgment confirmed in second instance on August 3, 2004, hence, final; another similar trial that was filed against seven people in which the court entered default judgment, ruling the eviction of the rural property; and a third trial that was lodged against three people equally declared in default and ordered to leave the rural property. The State claims that the petition is inadmissible because the resolutions issued in the framework of the eviction summary lawsuits filed by the 11 exPAC members mean that this matter is barred by res judicata, and because the parties' right to a fair trial and due process of law were respected. It moreover asserts that the IACHR has a subsidiary role and must therefore respect those decisions, for otherwise it would work as a fourth instance.

13. Likewise, it indicates that the petitioners failed to exhaust domestic remedies, since they should have lodged an ordinary action to have the registries by the exPAC annulled. It indicates that the petitioners could have used state legal assistance, but failed to do so. It claims that the petitioners were notified of the succession proceedings through the legal announcement for the appearance in court of relatives with the right to inherit the estate of the initial landowners, but did not appear in court to file their rights.

14. Lastly, it claims that the petitioners' right was not violated because the conflict took place between members of the same indigenous communities, and no public officer intervened in the purported violations.

VI. ANALYSIS OF EXHAUSTION OF DOMESTIC REMEDIES AND TIMELINESS OF THE PETITION

15. Concerning the issue of the titles of their lands, the petitioners claim that since 1999 they have sought state intervention through the Presidential Unit for Legal Assistance and Dispute Settlement in Land Matters and the Ministry of Agriculture to negotiate a solution, and even participated in talks with the exPAC, without any successful results. Moreover, they assert that they have had to defend their rights over the lands in more than 30 lawsuits filed by the exPAC to seize their property. They submit that in 2011 they lodged a remedy to protect their customary possession of the lands, but were later unable to continue the legal action in view of their inability to afford the fees involved. They also explain that in spite of their requests, the State never provided them with free legal assistance. Furthermore, they claim that the Guatemalan legal framework does not foresee any legal remedy for the determination of indigenous people's territorial rights; thus, they believe that the exception set forth in Article 46.2.a of the Convention is applicable. With respect to the acts of violence that they alleged suffered, including murders and threats, they affirm that these were reported to different authorities but were not duly investigated. In turn, the State simply refers to the aspects concerning land claims, and holds that the petitioners failed to exhaust domestic remedies, for they should have challenged the declaration of heirs or filed an appeal to annul the registries.

16. Based on the petitioners' claims, the Commission understands that for almost two decades the alleged victims repeatedly sought state recognition and protection of their territory by resorting to administrative and even judicial authorities. In the framework of these claims, the Commission sees that the communities have faced several obstacles, such as the alleged harassment aiming to displace them, the lack of state legal representation to defend their claims in court as well as to defend themselves in the context of the numerous legal actions brought by those holding individual titles over the lands; and the ineffectiveness of the talks held before state bodies in order to settle the conflict. The foregoing indicates that the alleged victims' efforts have been unsuccessful in having the State provide the land protection they seek.<sup>5</sup>

17. The Commission has established that the norm requiring the exhaustion of domestic remedies does not mean that alleged victims are necessarily obliged to exhaust all remedies available to them. Both the Court and the Commission have repeatedly held that said rule has been set forth in the State's interest, for it aims at sparing the State from responding before an international body for charges attributed to it before it has been able to settle them by internal means. Consequently, if the alleged victims brought the instant matter by any lawful and appropriate remedy based on the domestic legal framework and the State had the opportunity to settle the matter within its jurisdiction, then the purpose of the international norm has been served.<sup>6</sup>

18. The Commission recalls that the procedures to title indigenous or tribal lands must be effective and allow the affected communities (not solely private individuals) to bring them. In that sense, the mere possibility of recognizing rights through certain judicial processes cannot replace the actual recognition of those rights.<sup>7</sup> The Commission has seen in general that "Guatemala does not have legal instruments that put the indigenous peoples and communities in a position to be able to channel their demands for rights to ancestral lands and territories based on their ancestral occupation."<sup>8</sup> As a result, the Commission concludes that the exception to the rule of exhaustion of domestic remedies, set forth in Article 46.2.a of the Convention is applicable to this case.

19. In addition, as to the purported murder, threats and injuries suffered by members of the communities, the Commission notes that said events were reported to the authorities, and that to date, the investigations have not progressed; hence, the exception set forth in Article 46.2.c of the Convention applies to this aspect.

20. Since the petition was filed on April 11, 2008 and the effects of the alleged facts persist, the Commission believes that it was presented within a reasonable term and that the admissibility requirement concerning its timeliness must be declared met.

VII. ANALYSIS OF COLORABLE CLAIM

21. In view of the elements of fact and law presented by the parties and the nature of the matter brought to it, the Commission believes that, if proved, the claims concerning the alleged murder, the death threats and the injuries suffered by members of the communities; the lack of investigation into said acts; the lack of state legal representation in the proceedings brought against communal landowners; the lack of legal representation in any lawsuit filed to defend their ownership of the property; the purported violations of due process; the disturbances within the territory of their ancestral lands and the resulting impact on their living conditions, along with the purported lack appropriate procedures to claim their right to property, all could establish possible violations of Articles 4, 5, 8, 21, 24, 25 and 26 of the American Convention, to the detriment of the alleged victims,<sup>9</sup> in accordance with Articles 1.1 and 2 of the same treaty.

22. With regard to the alleged violation of Articles 7 and 11 of the Convention, the Commission notes that the petitioners did not present sufficient claims to prima facie consider a likely violation.

23. As to the State's arguments that this petition leads to a fourth-instance, the Commission recognizes that it is not entitled to review judgments issued by domestic courts acting within their jurisdiction and in accordance with due process of law and the right to a fair trial. However, the Commission recalls that under its mandate it is competent to declare a petition admissible and, if applicable, decide on the merits of the case even when the matter concerns domestic proceedings that may have violated any of the rights protected by the American Convention.

24. The Commission believes that the time restriction invoked by the State does not preclude the Commission's competence to hear the matter. In addition, with regard to the State's observation on the Inter-American Court on Human Rights' alleged lack of competence to examine facts taking place before March 9, 1987, the Commission considers that although some of the acts denounced in the petition began before said date, several of their consequences persist in the present.

VIII. DECISION

1. To declare the instant petition admissible in relation to Articles 4, 5, 8, 21, 24, 25 and 26 of the American Convention, in connection with the obligations established in its Articles 1.1 and 2;

2. To find the instant petition inadmissible in relation to Articles 7 and 11 of the American Convention; and

3. To notify the parties of this decision; to continue with the analysis on the merits; and to publish this decision and include it in its Annual Report to the General Assembly of the Organization of American States.
